

What do I want to learn or understand better?

For this sprint I wish to better my communication with the group. I feel like we have like two meetings per week where we talk through our next course of action, but in between those meetings I feel like we mostly stick to ourselves. I wish, at least for my part, that we would work more with each other. This has of course been hard due to the fact that we don't meet in real life which would make it feel like we actually all worked at an office together. Instead we are separated and have to learn to work together from a distance. And seeing as I have started working on the UI prototype I want to learn (or rather relearn), to use the online tool Figma.

How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

I hope to help the group, myself very much included, learn better methods of working and communicating outside of our regularly scheduled meetings.

What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

This last week I have been trying to make sure we can look at the progress we've made so far and use it to better understand our groups work pace. The main reason for this has actually not been to see how our pace could be increased (although that is of course also important), but to get a grasp of how much work we feel comfortable taking upon ourselves each week.

What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

This last week I was primarily focusing on the domain model but eventually realized that trying to finalize it felt more of a waterfall approach than an agile approach so refocused my attention to working on the UI for the modules we are currently working on.